"QUEEN OF NEEDLE"

Isabel Belausaran Makes Smallest Dolls in the World.

Clever Little Mexican Indian Maiden is Quaintest Figure in Mexico's Quaintest Town—Diminutive Dolls Are Remarkable.

Washington.—This is the story of Isabel Belausaran, maker of the smallest dolls in the world, who is the quaintest figure in Mexico's quaint town, Cuernavaca, as told by Russell Hastings Millward in a communication to the National Geographic society at Washington.

"This little girl is called 'Queen of the Needle,' writes Millward. 'The native of the village will tell you that no cleverer Mexican Indian maiden has ever been known.' The diminutive dolls she makes, both in point of construction and design, are the most remarkable in the world.

"The operation of making consists in forming a tiny framework of wire barely three-fourths of an inch in length and winding the same with many turns of silk thread. After the frame has been properly formed it is ready for dressing. The clothing is cut according to the character of the doll and fitted carefully about the small figure. The most difficult work, that of embroidering, is then begun. With a needle that can scarcely be held in the fingers and the finest of silk threads, various designs are actually embroidered on the clothing, and so cleverly is the work executed that even through a powerful magnifying glass the details of the design appear to be perfect. After dressing the figure it is necessary to add the hair, and what is undoubtedly the finest of the finest and most marvelous hair-dressing known is then performed on each doll. Even to the details of the braids and ribbons, the work is completely carried out. The eyes, nose, mouth, hands and feet are then formed and the doll is ready to be placed on sale in the village shop.

CENTRAL CLEARING HOUSE ADVOCATED

MACON MAN SUGGESTS PLAN TO HELP FARMERS

(Macon Telegraph). "Establish a great central clearing house for farm products, and do it now," is the advice of ex-Mayor John T. Moore, of Macon. Mr. Moore is one of the most successful farmers of Middle Georgia, and is a strong believer in diversified farming even in the piping times of peace. "The most potent factors to be met with in this most far-reaching question," said he yesterday, "are the non-producers. The small farmer gets into debt and moves to town where he gets a more or less steady income. On the farm he had borrowed money for one year with which to produce the next year's crop of cotton. He never lifts this debt. A bad year increases it. He is a veritable slave to this system and bad becomes worse.

"And why does he allow himself to be bound by this one-crop idea? It is because he has no market for other crops, such as cereals, potatoes, hay, etc., or, if he has, it is a spasmodic one at best. He cannot compete with the producers of the west because his product is not prepared in a manner to be made marketable.

"We have no elevator plants where his oats may be cleaned, shipped and evenly sacked.

"We have no flour mills to speak of where his wheat may be converted into flour and attractively sacked and barreled.

"We have no collecting depots for his potatoes, or peas, his hay or other sub products.

"We have no meat preparing, preserving or packing plants.

"And yet we know that the stock man wants his oats cleaned and clipped, and these so prepared cannot be supplied by the local farmer. The consumer is in the market at all seasons for meat, but the local farmer can only kill in cold weather. He sells his peas and hay by peddling. With these handicaps he has reached the necessity of giving all his ground and energy to the production of cotton.

"Now, here is my remedy for it all: Why shouldn't our farmers, our merchants and business men generally do away with this necessity by forming for themselves a co-operative association for the purpose of preparing these products for the market that they may compete with the products of the west and other sections?

"Then build a grain elevator suitably equipped for treatment of cereals, the clipping cleaning and sulfurizing of them. Then build a flour mill to dispose of the wheat, and a warehouse for collecting, sorting and sacking of potatoes, peas, etc. Then build a packing house and cold storage plant, so that meat may be disposed of any time during the year. In other words establish a great clearing house for our farm products.

"This is not nearly so studious a proposition as it may appear. The time is ripe for it right now. The financing can be effected by the trading by each farmer of one or more bales of cotton at ten cents per pound for equivalent value of stock of the association. There should be ten thousand interested farmers in Georgia who could buy a share with cotton. This would give a capitalization of $500,000, and it could be well spared right at this time. The farmer can help by thus further removing this amount of cotton from the market.

"Countless benefits would result to the community. Hundreds of idle people could be given employment. Home building supplies could be used entirely. The community could buy cheaper, as large freight charges incident to transporting products of other sections would be considerably eliminated.

"You can readily see what an impetus would be given to diversified farming, and what a stimulating effect it would have on the small farmer to utilize his land for the growing of crops other than cotton, and his farm for the raising of cattle.

"Of course, the affairs of the association, and the work of promulgating the enterprise, would have to be done by a competent board of directors and an energetic leader, but we have plenty such men. I would suggest for president such prominent business men as S. R. Jaques, T. D. Tinsley, A. E. Chappell, C. B. Adams, A. W. Smith, R. C. Corbin or J. A. Flournoy, or some prominent farmer like J. A. Evans, of Fort Valley; John T. Williams of Round Oak; J. Pope Brown, of Hawkinsville, or Col. James Smith, of Oglethorpe.

"To start the movement, I will give ten bales of cotton, and local brick concerns will give a million and a half of brick, taking the equivalent value in stock. Others no doubt will subscribe liberally. I believe the city of Macon will willingly give the necessary land for the purpose.

"The farmer could not better serve himself than by subscribing one or more bales of cotton, because he will get the first benefits of the association. Why not get together and talk it over NOW."

FARMERS TO ORGANIZE FOR ACREAGE REDUCTION

COUNTY ORGANIZATION TO WORK UNDER LEGAL PLAN

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 29.—It is believed that the plan for reducing cotton acreage endorsed by the Georgia Chamber of Commerce at its annual meeting in Macon Sept. 23rd, which it has named the "Lee County Plan," because the basic idea originated in Lee county, Ga., where the farmers are now being organized and a charter applied for, will prove to be the south's solution of the cotton problem.

Robert F. Maddox, a vice-president of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, and one of the most widely known of southern bankers, stated in an address before the annual meeting that he believed this plan to be the only one so far advanced that is both practical and legal, and that, if it is generally adopted throughout the cotton states, it will raise the price of both this year's and next year's cotton to normal level.

This plan provides a contract between farmers to limit production to ten acres to the mule, or plow, and makes it absolutely legal and enforceable by injunction, by incorporating a county association of 75 per cent of the farmers with the right to establish branch associations in all other counties of the state upon application of 75 per cent of the farms of the county, thus avoiding the expense and delay of incorporating in more than one county in a state. Skilled lawyers pronounce the plan absolutely constitutional, and say that national and state governments cannot legally, under either the federal or state constitutions, restrict cotton acreage or tax excess production.

The "Buy-a-bale Committee" in Atlanta has endorsed the plan in a letter to the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, and the work of organizing the counties of Georgia will probably be on with a rush within the week.

The "Lee County Plan" will be presented to the delegates to the South-eastern Food Crops Conference, which the Georgia Chamber of Commerce and the commissioner of agriculture of Georgia have called to meet in Atlanta Oct. 5th and 6th, and it is hoped that the plan will be adopted for all the south-eastern cotton states.

President Wilson telegraphed the Georgia Chamber of Commerce during the annual meeting as follows: "The White House, Washington, D. C., Sept. 23, 1914.—President Georgia Chamber of Commerce, Macon, Ga.: I congratulate you upon your work of the last year. The effect of the European war upon cotton confirms the wisdom of your campaign for increased production of food crops. I heartily commend the purpose of the Southern Food Crops Conference called by you to meet in Atlanta October 5th. The people of the southeast can do nothing better for their permanent welfare than to produce foodstuffs at least sufficient for their own use.

(Signed)

WOODROW WILSON.

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce is urging the increased planting of food crops, and particularly the fall grain and winter cover crops, and is preparing to furnish the farmers information on the standardizing of the preparation and marketing of grains and hay on a parity with the western products in the markets and as a basis for the advancing of supplies by merchants and money by banks.

FARMERS GAIN MILLIONS AS RESULT OF WAR

COTTON ALONE OF ALL PRODUCTS HAS NOT ADVANCED IN PRICE

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Farmers of the United States will receive more money for their crops this year than ever before in the history of the country. Not only is the wheat crop by far the largest ever raised, but the returns that can be counted safely for this crop will exceed the greatest expectations of a few weeks ago.

In virtually every important wheat raising section of the country the producer can now obtain $1 a bushel for his wheat. Two months ago wheat prices were 40 cents lower than at present, and in many sections farmers were not getting more than 60 cents a bushel for their wheat.

Considerable wheat was sold at low prices, but of the 900,000,000 bushels that will be raised this year it is not likely that more than 200,000,000 bushels have been sold at this time from the farms.

A 40-cent advance in the price of wheat means on 700,000,000 bushels $280,000,000, and from present indications in regard to the export demand a reduction of farm prices for wheat below the dollar level does not seem reasonable. In fact, judging from the way Europe is buying both wheat and flour, farmers may not be willing to sell freely at $1.

Oats prices have been enhanced about 30 per cent in the heaviest part of the crop movement. On the basis of present values for oats compared to what they were at the beginning of the harvest, there has been an increase in the value of the crop of about $175,000,000. Corn prices were high at the beginning of the war, and while there has been no export demand as in wheat and oats to stimulate speculative activity, prices are now the highest in years.

SPECULATING ON THE OUTCOME OF THE WAR

END NOT IN SIGHT, IS OPINION OF THOSE BEST POSTED

According to interviews published in the New York World it is the consensus of opinion of more than two score active army officers above the rank of captain stationed in and around Washington that the European war will last from nine to eighteen months and that the allies will win. The reason that many of them gave for thinking that the allies would win was that the allies have the greater resources and that they would gradually wear Germany out, and it is their opinion it will take one to two years to do it.

Only two of all those interviewed held the opinion that Germany had a chance to win and they were by no means enthusiastic in their view. It is fair to assume that all the officers who expressed an opinion spoke as military experts and were not influenced in the least by their sympathies. It is a fact, of course, that the allies have by far the greater resources. They can put more men in the field, have the more money and have available the greater food supplies.

All of the officers were of the opinion that the contest would be fought to a finish—that is, that the war would go on until one side or the other was exhausted. The issues are of such a character that a compromise is practically impossible. As a matter of fact neither side is desirous of a compromise since it would simply mean another great war just as soon as the belligerents were able to engage in battle again.

In the beginning of the war Germany's mighty fighting machine moved rapidly up to the very gates of Paris, suffering only a slight check in Belgium. At that point, for the first time, the machine came in contact with the fighting spirit of the French that was developed by the belief that if Germany won France, practically, would become a territory of Germany and Frenchmen be toilers for the Germans. It was the determination to maintain their independence, to preserve their national character and to protect their homes that gave them the strength to drive the Germans back. The fighting machine was unable to cope with this spirit which is near approach to Paris developed. And this same spirit was noticeable in the battle of Marne and is apparent in the battle of Aisne. If it doesn't wear out, if it continues to be as strong as at present, the chances are that the Germans will be driven out of France. If the Germans are placed on the defensive on their own soil they will develop a similar spirit and hence with their military efficiency may force the allies back into France.

But, after all, the war, according to the experts interviewed, is to be one of endurance, of resources, of the strongest battalions. In the battle now going on the forces are pretty nearly equal and in the matter of artillery there isn't a great deal of difference. The Germans have the heavier guns but those of the French are most deadly. It is the belief of

HUTCHENS TO RUN AGAINST HARDWICK

"PROGRESSIVES" NAME CANDIDATES AGAINST DEMOCRATS

Atlanta, Sept. 29.—That the progressive party will put a ticket in the field to be voted on at the coming general election was definitely decided tonight at a meeting of representatives from Fulton county and the Fifth district when the following ticket was nominated:

For the long-term United States senatorship, C. W. McClure, of Atlanta; for the short-term United States senatorship, G. R. Hutchens, of Rome; for congress from the Fifth district, Sam J. Jones, of Atlanta; for representatives from Fulton county, W. M. Everett, W. D. Hart and John P. Fough.

The meeting decided to leave the matter of a platform up to the state convention which meets in Macon next Saturday at the Hotel Dempsey at 11 o'clock.

Horses for Sale.

I have on hand three good buggy horses for sale. Anyone needing a good horse will do well to see me. Will sell or trade for good mules.

Cotton Prices Decline

A decline of practically 1½ cents per pound in the price of upland cotton has occurred during the past week, having dropped from 8½ to 7½ for the best grades. Notwithstanding the decline, the market has been crowded most of the time, last Saturday's receipts being the largest of any day during the season—approximately 300 bales.

Those best posted about the market are still hopeful that prices will advance, and are advising the farmers not to rush in their cotton. It is their belief that conditions are becoming more settled as reports from the European trouble indicate a possible early termination of the war. Their advice to the farmers is, "Sell only what you are compelled to meet urgent obligations."

City Prepares Hitching Lot

A convenience which the country public will appreciate is the hitching lot which the city has prepared on East Main street, opposite the Jaekel Hotel. The lot, which is the property of Mr. S. F. Olliff, was donated by him for the use of the public, and the hitching racks were erected by the city. This sort of convenience has been desired a long time, and will be greatly appreciated by the country people who drive their teams into town.

Ladies.

I will make up your combings into braids and switches. Have some nice switches for sale. Correspondence solicited and satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. T. A. Hannah, Brooklet, Ga.

Quick Agency Buys Cotton.

The Averitt Auto Co., local agent for the Buick Motor Co., of Flint, Mich., have added their might to the rapidly growing buyable movement. Upon instructions from the Buick people, the local concern has bought four bales of cotton at 10 cents per pound. Their action was based upon telegraphic communication received Monday morning. The instructions were to "buy for our account and hold same until further notice; one ton distressed cotton for cash at 40 cents per pound." The telegram added "to further assist the cotton grower of the south, we are carrying over half million dollars cash in Georgia bales."

We are giving $18 for seed at Statesboro. E. A. Smith.

American military experts that is the plan of the allies to centralize the Germans on their own soil and then attack them on all sides and thus smash the mighty German fighting machine. The plan is easy to understand, much easier than it is to make it effective.

COST OF MAINTENANCE IS GREAT ROAD PROBLEM

"Overtopping all other road problems in its importance is that of maintenance," says Logan Walker Page, director of the U. S. office public roads and president of the American Highway Association. "The destructive agencies of traffic and the elements are increasing in the activities and it is idle to talk of permanent roads any more than to speak of a house, a fence, or a railroad tie as permanent," says Mr. Page. "The public roads today, by reason of exceptionally destructive traffic conditions, are more costly in construction and this is continually increasing with the advance in the price of labor and material. It is criminally wasteful, therefore, to invest large sums of public money in building the highways demanded by traffic, unless the investment is conserved by adequate maintenance. Without such adequate maintenance a road costing anywhere from $5,000 to $15,000 per mile may go to ruin in a year or two, thus involving a loss of considerable magnitude.

When it is considered that the annual expenditure on roads in the United States is well over $200,000,000 annually, the seriousness of the question is apparent. I look to the conference of highway officials which will be held during the fourth American road congress, which meets in Atlanta, Ga., on Nov. 9th, to devote much attention to road maintenance, and that the cumulative moral effect of their findings will go far towards bringing legislatures and county boards to a realization of the necessity for prompt action. The roads should be classified and suitable maintenance, in organization and money, provided according to the importance of the representative classes of roads."
